

New Bond Issue Measure Signed By Gov. O'Conor

Fifth Group of Bills Enacted into Law Brings Total to 647

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 6 (UPI)—The state bond issue, Baltimore-Washington highway, marriage and automobile tag bills topped the list of 101 measures enacted into law today by Governor O'Conor.

The fifth group of bills signed by O'Conor since the general assembly adjourned sine die brought the total new laws passed on statute books to 647. He has vetoed thirteen, leaving 278 more bills to be acted upon.

Earlier, the legislative council held its first meeting since the legislature adjourned. General assembly-approved resolutions which requested the council to make certain surveys were studied and plans laid to undertake such work.

The council decided to review the causes of legislative jams so that steps can be taken to avoid them. It also requested O'Conor to sign the retail installment sales bill.

Three new council members were present today. They were Senator Robert Kimble (R-Allegany) and Delegates Harry Warren (D-Baltimore), John Luber (D-Fifth Balto). Kimble replaced Senator A. Earl Snipley (R-Carroll) and Warren and Luber succeeded Delegates Paul Gordish (D-fourth Balto) and Walter J. Locke (D-fifth Balto).

Superhighway Planned

The new bond issue law provides $237,000 for capital improvements during the next biennium. New construction is slated at state hospitals, child-caring institutions and sanatoriums. Apparently $100,000 is to be spent for new construction at the Princess Anne Academy to replace buildings destroyed in a recent fire.

The State Roads commission, in its discretion, is authorized to issue bonds for the construction of a new $30,000,000 Baltimore-Washington superhighway and a bridge over or tunnel under the Baltimore harbor under the new highway law.

The new marriage law prohibits judges from issuing court orders waiving the forty-eight-hour marriage law delay unless one or both of the contracting parties are bona fide Maryland residents.

It is aimed at curbing hasty marriages—particularly at Elkton which gets many applicants from out-of-state—made possible through indiscriminate use of court orders.

Divorce Measures Signed

O'Conor also signed two divorce measures today. One provides for the granting of a divorce when one spouse is permanently or incurably insane. The other prohibits the entering of a divorce decree against a non-resident unless the plaintiff has given the clerk of court the defendant's address so he can give notification of the proceedings. If a defendant's present address is unknown, the defendant's last known address is to be given by the plaintiff.

The new auto license law gives certain county treasurers the right to distribute plates for passenger vehicles at the county seats of government. An extra fee of fifteen cents is to be charged and given to the county for issuing permits.

Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Frederick, Harford, Howard, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Washington and Calvert counties are exempt from the law. The county commissioners of Allegany, Carroll, Cecil, Dorchester, Garrett, Talbot, Worcester and Wicomico counties are to decide whether they wish local distribution of tags.

Another major bill signed requires wholesale and retail firearms dealers to keep records of their sales and give police information such as the purchaser, his address, the make and calibre of the weapon.

General developments related to British aid and the national defense arose elsewhere in Washington.

President Roosevelt met for an hour and a half with his principal advisors on defense and was believed to have discussed the possibility of speeding the production of bombing planes.

The president designated Major General James H. Burns as an assistant to Harry L. Hopkins in supervising the aid-to-Britain program.

The army disclosed that some 8,000 young men would be called to active duty as second lieutenants when they are graduated from college and complete their reserve officers training courses this summer.

which will not interfere with national productivity, "correction of unsound features" of present tax law and some borrowing.

At the same time Houston took exception to Secretary Morgenthau's formula for federal financing which calls for two-thirds tax revenue and one-third borrowing.

"Our own belief," the witness said, "is that there is no such rigid formula which may be soundly applied to defense financing. Too much depends on the level of expenditure and the effect both taxes and borrowing will have at any given time upon our National economy as a whole."

Houck Indicted

indictment asserted that on April 24 the Frederick county man made a statement asserting that he had been approached by a lawyer named Walter or Waters who said it was necessary to collect money to pass certain legislation of interest to typewriting concerns and that he therefore received $50 from a type-writer dealer in Frederick county who was named as Tommy Williams, and turned the money over to the "lawyer" whom, he said, he could not identify.

Testimony Cited

Subsequently, on April 28, the defendant asserted, Houck reappeared before the grand jurors. The document stated he then testified as follows:

"It wasn't anything in addition, but I want to correct several statements that I made last week. The first thing, I want to apologize to you gentlemen for taking up your time and infringing on your patience, and, secondly, on your judgment in the fantastical story that I told you last week. Everything I told you was the truth with the exception that I took this money, this $50, to Annapolis to pay to a man.

"I did not take the $50 to Annapolis to pay to a man, and the reason why I got the check cashed was at the time that I got the money there was no thought in my mind as to doing anything wrong with it."

The indictment alleged that Houck had used the money from the check for his own personal use and that the account previously given of turning the money over to a lawyer was "just a plain lie, that's all it was, and that it has been preying on my mind so that I just had to come in and get myself clear with you gentlemen, that I just could not stand it because I am a poor liar and that it is the first time that I ever got mixed up in anything like this."

The indictment also set forth that Houck then asserted that he did not know of such person as the man Waters or Waters, who was "a myth."

pany M, from Annapolis, will carry 182 enlisted men. The Third Battalion headquarters detachment of Pocomoke City, will have an enlisted roster of thirty-nine men.

The two other battalions and the four unlettered companies of the regiment will be brought to war strength as the selectees arrive at Fort Meade.

A training cadre under the command of Capt. Robert C. Bean Company M, met the selectees, carrying blue barracks bags, and escorted them to their barracks where they will live during their year in the army.

The selectees and the training cadre will be quarantined in the battalion area for two weeks before joining their respective companies.

Col. D. John Markey, commanding officer of the one-hundred and fifteenth Infantry, said today that the reception of the selectees marks a change in the life of the National Guard. It is quite clear that under the Selective Service act the National Guard will not have any more voluntary enlistments."

Markay Likes Guardsmen

"We look upon the reception of the selectees with a great deal of interest as we are seeing in action the development of a sound military policy for our country," the colonel said.

The National Guard has spent much of its time and a great deal of effort in bringing to the attention of young men their obligation for national defense. There is a feeling throughout the National Guard that their efforts and service have now "proved the value of the citizen soldier in our scheme of national defense."

The eighteenth National Guard Division, of which the twenty-ninth Division is one, represent a "strong and firm foundation" upon which to build the nation's defense, Col. Markey asserted.

Their ability to absorb in their ranks almost one-half of the selectees of the nation is "proof of the worthwhileness of all previous efforts" that have been put forth in peacetime by citizen soldiers, the colonel said.

Policy Change Indicated

The British radio, heard in New York, recalled that Molotov's replacement of Litvinov preceded the swing of Soviet foreign policy to Germany which culminated in Molotov's negotiation of the non-aggression pact with Germany. It added that with the German occupation of Bulgaria and Rumania and the invasion of Yugoslavia, on Russia's Southern flank, "a further change seems to be indicated."

An official communiqué said Molotov was relieved of the premiership at his own repeated request; that he had, time after time, complained of the difficulties of filling both that post and the foreign affairs job.

The frown-faced rubber nipple was given its place in the child's early life as a factor in its physical rather than mental development. Whether mother-fed or bottle fed an infant was found to require a minimum of two hours of sucking exercise a day and the cotton-stuffed "pacifier" was found to be the correct implementer. Strong sucking develops deep breathing at a time when the infant's respiration is a rather shaky procedure.

Dr. Ribble said she found "astonishing" in view of the facts, the strong tendency among pediatricians and obstetricians to separate mother and child at birth and to isolate the infant into a highly sterilized and impersonal atmosphere devoid of tender relationship just at the time when close contact with the mother is a necessity.

2,000 Acres Laid Waste in Garrett By Forest Fires

Raging 1,500-Acre Blaze Threatens Swallow Falls Recreation Area

Another outbreak of destructive forest fires laid waste nearly 2,000 acres of Garrett county woodlands yesterday and Monday. It was reported last night.

The largest woods fire in many years swept about 1,500 acres on Piney mountain and in the Salt Block section before being brought under control early yesterday morning according to Matthew E. Martin, superintendent of the Savage River State Forest. The blaze, which swept into the state from West Virginia, was brought under control after threatening for a time to advance into the Swallow Falls recreational area.

High Winds Fan Flames

The fire advanced before a high wind, with flames sometimes leaping several hundred feet of the main blaze and was stopped just short of the Swallow Falls section.

Two blazes near Swanton burned over 225 acres according to Martin, and a 100-acre blaze which started Sunday near Bloomington was not brought under control until today.

District Forester H. C. Buckman and District Forest Warden George M. Browning could not be reached for statements.

Situation Critical

Meanwhile, the Associated Press in a dispatch from Baltimore quoted State Forester F. W. Beasley as saying the situation was more critical than at any time in the past twenty years. In addition to the blazes in Garrett, he reported other fires breaking out in Montgomery and Prince George's counties and sections of the Eastern Shore.

As the weather bureau predicted "some likelihood" of showers, Beasley declared that "nothing less than a soaking rain will bring relief." An ordinary heavy shower would be soaked up in a few hours.

The fire front in Allegany county was reported quiet yesterday by District Forest Warden Urner Wigfield.

Eden said it was Britain's mission "together with the help we can receive from the United States of America"—to make European nations "secure from the haunting dread that shadows our own time."

These references to United States aid caused one heckler to interrupt with "let us do a bit ourselves."

The secretary retorted that he was "presupposing maximum effort of ourselves and the United States," and that "that was why I welcomed the immense step forward by the United States of America in deciding to send ships to the Red Sea."

Concern of Turkey

Eden said the "created" trouble in Iraq where British and British-trained Iraqi troops now are fighting is of great concern to Britain and Turkey. As for Turkey he said:

"I am sure the loyalty of their alliance with this country will be the basis of the Turkish government's policy."

Britain had nothing to be ashamed of in her dealings with the Arab peoples, and especially Iraq, the foreign secretary said. Iraq's independence had been assured by Britain and "it is we who have assisted them and in every respect have kept our word."

Waves of Warplanes

With the half of Athens watching from the house tops, a flight of Stukas slipped out of the sun, dropped their loads at the bottom of steep dives, and zoomed across the city in perfect order, unmindful of the anti-aircraft fire.

Fighters and short-range bombers stayed in the air over the front during every daylight hour, bombing troops and attacking roads.

Correspondents visiting the front could not drive for more than ten minutes on any road in Greece outside Athens without being bombed and machine-gunned.

Longer-range bombers attacked seaports, dropped mines and roved out to sea to attack shipping.

One of the most spectacular raids was by daylight on Piraeus.

Stimson reported that the blockade around Britain was becoming so effective that it not only imperceptibly delivery of war supplies from this country "but the supplies of the food necessary for her population are already becoming gradually impeded."

The other ferry pilots missing:

Parents of another of the fliers, Irvin Landis, 25, of Poyerton, Pa., said he had written them he was sailing aboard a freighter transport for England with thirteen other American aviators for the Ferry Service. He had gone to Montevideo within two weeks after the war started.

Piraeus never recovered from the awesome devastation of that one blow.

That was the first swift omen of defeat. Spreading destruction from the Vardar valley to Crete, the German Luftwaffe virtually alone broke the British-Greek resistance in three short weeks.

This is the unanimous conclusion of neutral observers who watched the Greeks fight the Italians for six months only to go down so quickly before the Germans.

The disaster was partly due to official negligence.

A munitions ship loaded with T. N. T. had arrived in Piraeus Saturday, but no attempt was made to unload it, although it was known that war was imminent.

Six Hour Raid

In the six-hour Sunday night raid, a dive bomber dropped low over the harbor and set fire to a lighter near the munitions ship, which itself soon caught fire.

A few berths away was the British Cruiser Calcutta. Most of her crew were in Athens celebrating the victory of Cape Matapan.

Pulling a total of 338 votes Shimmon Hutcheson was elected bailiff for his sixth one-year term. John R. Merriweather was runner-up with 130 votes and Elbridge Jake Moses was third with 58.

Unopposed, D. Clarkson Laird was elected mayor for the fifth consecutive year. He received 349 votes.

Patrick Doolan and Walter Glise each received one "written in" vote.

These men are replacements for draftees who were rejected at the last induction of men from Board No. 2.

Bring Up Your Children To Be Good Parents
Succeeding Generations Will See Results, Says Doctor Myers

BY GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
As we parents bring up our children well, we not only make of them good citizens in the home and community and agreeable companions to live with in our family, but we also bring them up to become good wives and husbands, good mothers and fathers.

Please allow me to give a concrete example concerning a young father:

Phil grew up in a home where he was wanted, loved and understood. He learned in his early years the alphabet of citizenship, respect for the right of others and regard for authority. He got some spankings in his early years though not many, by parents who planned and agreed upon the few things he would not be allowed to do without getting immediate punishment. Though he learned early to obey, he rarely was commanded. Also he learned to cooperate; excepting the few routines, he was not commanded to do things during his early years and seldom later. He was requested and allowed to choose in regard to these requests. When he was requested he really was requested and not commanded in disguise.

Childhood Training

Since his parents were human like all other parents, they were not perfect but they tried hard to do their best and won the growing lad's esteem, companionship and cooperation. As far as possible they treated him as a sacred personality, answering all his questions as well as they were able, listening attentively to what he had to say, never laughing at his queries and remarks. They read to him daily from the time he was about eighteen months of age.

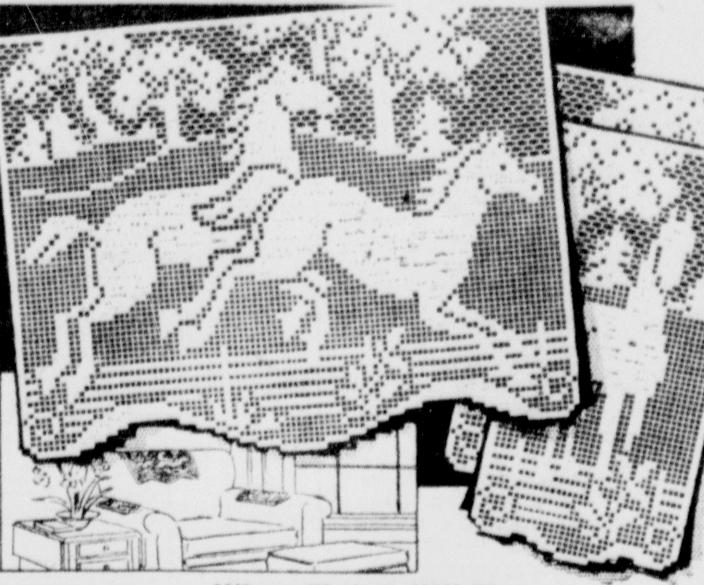

The father spent considerable time with the boy and helped in his physical care, even during his infancy. The father also shared in the household cares and when the lad was old enough to help he also shared the chores. Playmates came to his home and the child was allowed to engage in the rough-and-tumble of the neighborhood.

That lad is a father now. His wife and he aim to work and plan together for good guidance of their own children, as his parents had done for him.

Phil helps his wife with the household chores. Since the first baby was a year of age, Phil has bathed her and put her to bed. While he tends her now he talks to her and has been reading to her daily for many months. Phil evinces beautiful insight and understanding of this two year old and seems to enjoy every minute with her.

While the second baby was be-

TODAY YOUR GROCER CAN SUPPLY IT! THIS IMPROVED, DOUBLY DELICIOUS "GOLDEN SOFT" KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

IT'S LIGHTER! CRISPER! BRIGHT AS SHREDS OF GOLD!

Copyright, 1941, by Kellogg Company

WHAT'S THIS? An improvement in an old favorite cereal? It is indeed! Just wait till you taste the improved ALL-BRAN!

IT'S DOUBLY DELICIOUS! It's made of finer quality bran from one of the world's softest wheats. The improved ALL-BRAN comes out of our toasters bright as shreds of gold. It's lighter! Crisper! More delicate! Ask your grocer for it today.

"Why improve an old favorite cereal like KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN?" many people have asked us. Because making a good thing better is an old American custom. And because Kellogg's grain buyers have discovered a marvelous wheat from which comes a bran of exceptional quality.

Put through ALL-BRAN's toasting ovens, the bran from this choice wheat came out bright as shreds of gold—and lighter, crispier, more delicate than any we had used in 20 years of making this famous cereal.

And now the improved and more delicious ALL-BRAN is at your grocer's.

If you or other members of your family are troubled with constipation due to lack of proper

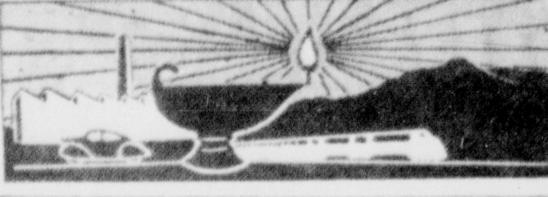

"bulk" in the diet, try the improved ALL-BRAN. It is just as effective as ever—but doubly delicious. But be sure to eat it regularly; it takes a little time for best results. Make ALL-BRAN your steady breakfast cereal, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation due to lack of "bulk."

ALL-BRAN is made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. It is sold by grocers and served in restaurants everywhere.

Republican Prospects Good but Diligent Work Is Needed

REPUBLICANS of this county and of the other four counties of the Sixth congressional district should feel gratified over the growing interest and enthusiasm being displayed in the candidacy of A. Charles Stewart for the vacant seat in the House of Representatives at Washington, which is to be filled at the special election called for May 27.

This was demonstrated at the meeting held this week by the Stewart-for-Congress Committee jointly with the women's committee thereof and the State Central committee of the county. The large number in attendance and the sincere and alert manner in which they were about to wage a vigorous campaign in behalf of the election of Stewart bodes splendidly for a successful campaign.

But a word of caution seems in order. There is much work to be done and the time is short in which to do it. It cannot be left to the enthusiastic workers who have volunteered their services. The party membership as a whole must take an active part if this campaign is to be effective. The big task is to get out the vote. If that is done the election of Stewart is safe. If it isn't, he can't be elected and that is all there is to it.

The magnitude of the task is to be seen in noting the fact that despite the majority in the Republican registration of this county the Democrats have been rolling up victories in the last six elections in this district, chiefly, of course, by riding on the coattails of Roosevelt. In the seven prior elections the Republicans were victorious achieving a plurality as high as 10,592 in 1928. The Democratic plurality was cut down to only 1,466 in 1938 when Stewart, the best runner the party has had in recent years, came near election, offsetting a Democratic plurality of 14,137 in the preceding election.

Let the Republicans, therefore, not become afflicted with over-confidence this time just because enthusiasm is running high over the present excellent prospects. Let them remember that the Democrats are hard at work, and that while they are not making much noise about it, they are quietly and consistently going ahead with campaign plans and seeking to get out a good party vote.

In a special election, with all of the general campaign excitement absent, the vote will be comparatively small. Entirely too many voters will be engrossed with their own private and business affairs. The international situation, too, which is occupying the minds of so many, will naturally divert their attention from the election, although considering all that is at stake this ought not to be the case. All the Democrats have to do is to get out a fairly good vote of their own party members. The registered Republicans will have to overcome that. They should, accordingly, get busy about it and get busy now.

An Aid in Building Army Morale

AS IN THE LAST WAR, the provision of recreational facilities for boys in training camps is an important part of national defense. The United Service Organizations, under the direction of Thomas E. Dewey, will soon make an appeal for approximately $11,000,000 to put into effect a program already planned in collaboration with the government.

The government will build and equip service clubs near the various camps, any of which are far from any center of civilization or amusement. The Organized Service Unions will provide personnel. Working together on the project are the YMCA, the YWCA, the Salvation Army, the National Aid Association, the Jewish Welfare Board and the National Catholic Community Service.

The amount of money asked is a small one compared to the total amount being spent on national defense. But the purpose to which it will be put is not insignificant. The right to wholesome amusement and recreation after working hours is one which Americans cherish. The new program should find a host of supporters.

When New Dealers Become Critical

WHEN a New Deal newspaper like the Times over at Fairmont, W. Va., becomes outspokenly apprehensive about national leadership, or, rather, the lack of it, it would appear that something ought to be done about it.

The Times feels that Jim Farley ought to be brought back into the government as one of the top directors of the war effort and notes that there is growing sentiment to that effect in Washington. "Jim Farley may have no capacity as a war maker," it says, "but in six weeks he can cut more red tape and get more people really interested in the problems of government than any man we know of." Louis Johnson, too, could do good work, it thinks.

The Times says that the country has little confidence in Miss Perkins as secretary of labor and that Harold Ickes is another who seems out of place in a great national emergency.

"The simple truth of the matter is that the country is getting scared," says the Times. "We are not so cocksure any more that this fellow Hitler can be stopped. We are just a little doubtful about Britain's holding on, and we are beginning to wonder, in the way we are going at it, if America can deliver the goods. Many people have had lurking fears along these lines for some time but what really brought them to the surface was the injection of such fellows as Harry Hopkins and Wayne Coy into key positions in the defense set-up."

If men like Jim Farley and Jesse Jones were selected to carry the ball and run interference for the president everybody would feel that a touchdown was in sight, but when the country gets the impression that in America's most crucial moment the signals are to be called by a group of ex-social workers chances are some genuine alarm will be felt.

Personally we have little conception of the magnitude of the job before us, but, as a matter of fact very few other people do. Like everybody else we have great faith and confidence in the wisdom, ability and leadership of the president. But it is too big a job for one man to do.

"As we say the war effort is an enigma to most people, and the impression is gaining ground that the government is moving farther and farther away from the people. Such a condition, if it exists, should be corrected."

A warning such as this and from such a source indicates that the Washington administration should itself be doing more in behalf of the objectives about which it has been urging the people to become alert.

The Free Spirit Can Still Assert Itself

COMMENCEMENT ORATORS soon will be doing their stuff. The thousands of young graduates of school and college will be listening to all manner of advice—some of it light, some of it heavy; some of it in line with youth's real opportunities, some of it well meant but impractical in so far as the world of actuality is concerned.

A good guess though is that the "Class of 1941" will survive all these rhetorical expressions and proceed to find vocations of social value and inner contentment. With all its difficult and unsolved problems, America remains a land in which the free spirit can assert itself, granted a reasonable amount of training, ambition and the will to win.

These young graduates have not been subjected to academic suppression or scholastic dictation. The programs which they have completed have been conceived with a view to maximum intellectual liberty and individual creativeness. That is the American way, and it is reasonable to assume deep-seated appreciation of the blessings of freedom among these energetic, eager folk who are about to take their respective places amid the national scene.

The Forgotten Cigarette Is Sometimes Costly

YOU light a cigarette. Your doorbell or your telephone rings, and you hurry away, leaving your cigarette perched on the edge of the ash tray. Maybe you're gone ten minutes. By the time you get back, your cigarette may have burned itself down to the end. Perhaps it will have slipped off the ash tray and burned a hole in your table cover.

According to the National Board of Fire Underwriters, now celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary, many fires in homes are started just this way. From people putting down a lighted cigarette and then forgetting it. In the home of many smokers you will see ugly burns on the furniture, burns that no polish will cover. All because of the careless habit of starting to smoke, and then doing something else.

There's an old saying "you can't take it with you." A cigarette is something you must take with you. Or you'll be sorry.

It is said that the new 65,000-ton United States battleships will be able to get into only a few harbors. Customs change, and the tar of the future will have girls in only three or four ports.

Who Wants the Pink Pills?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I had a cold and I didn't want it. I was told that if I went to a certain drug store and asked to have a certain prescription filled, the man behind the counter would sell me a dozen pretty bright-pink pills and that would be the last of the cold. . . . Absolutely. Those pink pills had never failed to work. They were "miraculous" in their effect. I'd see.

Well, I scoffed but I went. I bought the pills and paid fifty cents for them. Also I asked the man what was in them but he evaded and said they were a "compound" and he wouldn't tell me why. . . . I hadn't really thought he would. . . . But I took the pills—and they didn't do me a bit of good. I might as well have taken bread pills. . . . And the family laughed at me just as it laughed when I let my barber sell me something that eventually went down the drain. . . . Those pills did me no harm but my cold laughed at them, too.

So today I brought them over and gave them to a friend who thinks he has been helped by them. He can have them. The next time he has a cold he can take the pretty little fellows and be benefited by them. . . . He believes in them more than I do. And perhaps that's why they help him and do not help me. (A mystical idea which may be valid.)

I had a little booklet on astrology and I thought it was nonsense. I tried to make something of it, but I failed. I gave it my serious attention, but still I couldn't believe in any connection between the conjunction of heavenly bodies and my own fortune. . . . So I gave that book away to a man who said he thought there might be something in astrology. He believed in the stars. Not passionately but at least he thought they did "incline" even though they might not "compel" a human being.

So he has the book that was meaningless to me. . . . Once I would not have given it away. I was more then, more convinced that what was good for me must be good for everyone else and what was bad for me should be kept from all other people. . . . In those days I'd have thrown the pink pills and the book on astrology into the fire. Proudly.

Production Battle Really Vital Now, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, May 6—Late as it is, we are finally aware that the industrial side of war is just as important as the military side—more important just now. At last we know that the battle of production is more vital to us at this stage than any battle in the Balkans ever was. We should have known all this long, long ago. We learned and led the world in the lesson in 1918. But we forgot to remember it—forgot, notwithstanding the constant warnings of such veterans of that elder effort as B. M. Baruch and, with becoming modesty, the constant yammering of this column for six years past.

Yes, we now recognize that our industry must be organized. But what are we doing about that? It is sad to report that we are footling and "galloping in place."

The outstanding lesson of the World war was that, in order to get full war effort out of industry, it must be marshalled as a regiment is marshalled. In peace, our rule is "competition is the life of trade." In war, the industrial rule must be "co-operation to the uttermost—co-operation without stint or limit."

Competitors must become co-operators and under the leadership of government, each great competitive industry, within itself and in respect of all others, must become a team fighting toward a common goal and not battle royal by a ringful of blindfold sluggers.

Patents, facilities and shortage inventories must be pooled and trade secrets shared. Regardless of primary contracts, the manufacture of component parts must be farmed out until every wheel in the nation is turning in a common concert of action.

Key Principle

This isn't any theoretical essay. This is the necessary key principle of industrial war effort. What are we doing about that? From time to time for several years this column has pointed out that we can't do anything effective about it and still enforce to the letter the anti-trust act and that the first step in industrial mobilization is the creation of "war-service committees" of bellwethers in each industry to receive the directions of government and get co-operation in carrying them out.

That should have been the very first step of the Knudsen-Hillman O. P. M. It is turning out to be about the last one. It is going forward now and the president's letter about pooling machine-tool facilities is one of the outward and visible signs.

Why wasn't it done before? Because the Sherman and Clayton acts forbid it. Now both Attorney General Jackson and his anti-trust assistant specialist, Mr. Thurman Arnold, are on record as saying that such "combinations in restraint of trade," if made at the request of government and under government supervision, will not be prosecuted.

That is highly commendable patriotic common-sense on their part. It could have been done much earlier had O. P. M. sensed the principles of its problem and requested it.

Oil Operators Caught

But is it enough? The last time an industry tried that was when the petroleum industry at Mr. Ickes' request or with his blessing attempted to "take distress oil off the market." Government request and supervision didn't save those operators. Many were indicted and some were convicted. Industrialists can hardly forget that.

Executive officials have no right to amend or repeal laws. Too much of that is being either done or considered. It is said that the statutory draft age-limits are to be changed without recourse to Congress because debate might hurt the project and that convoy legislation mustn't be debated because it would be misunderstood abroad. That tendency toward government by decree is bad medicine.

Needed changes in the defense laws should be made openly and the greatest need just now is statutory clarification of the anti-trust acts.

The Money For Mars

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Washington press dispatches inform us that the new tax program now in course of preparation, will call for an increased levy on the American people of $3,500,000,000. The bill will contemplate, we are told, increases in virtually all existing categories of taxes, with perhaps a number of new taxes added.

That sounds like and is a tremendous sum of money. But even this, added to all existing sources, will, in all probability, fall short of the need.

Take the defense program itself. Congress already has appropriated or authorized contractual obligations amounting to $43,000,000,000 which is only $7,000,000,000 less than the total World War expenditures. All, or most of this money, will be spent by the end of 1942. In the last six months of 1940, $1,400,000,000 was spent. During the first three months of the present year alone, $1,800,000,000 was spent.

And then, of course, there are the wholly unpredictable lease-lend obligations to say nothing of the carrying of our already tremendous internal debt and the financing of a still notoriously extravagant civil administration.

And so far as any man may know to the contrary, this is just the beginning.

If there is nothing else certain there is no escaping the fact that for a long, long time to come the American people will be carrying a tremendous burden of taxes.

Honeymoon Gold by PEGGY DERN

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE
DONALD hesitated as his turn to speak arrived. June looked at him swiftly, and after a moment he said, "I am afraid I can't speak for my wife. I believe she has commitments in Hollywood the last of this month. For my part, however, I expect to stay just as long as you'll let me. This looks like a real story, and I seem to be the only newshound on the scene. Maybe it'll be one of those 'scoops' the movies are always talking about."

"Swell!" said Hugh, and stood up. "You're all a bunch of regular fellows and I appreciate it. You'll be guarded, however, the new boatman you hired, Forman, is one of our men. He's got a system rigged up by which he can summon help from the mainland at a moment's notice."

They all trooped down to the pier with Hugh to see him off. And when the boat carrying him to the mainland had become a small dot in the distance, they turned and looked at each other.

"What do we do now?" asked

Terry laughed and slid her hand through Bill's unjugged arm. "Well, I don't know just what you're going to do, but as for Bill and me, we're going to take up our honeymoon where it was so unpleasantly interrupted. So long, folks—see you later."

"A shameless wench," Bill apologized for her as she turned away. "But it's the way she was brought up. You'll excuse her, I hope."

The others trailed away. June and Donald walked without speaking until they were out of ear shot of the others. June stopped then and looked up at Donald. There was pain and hurt in her eyes as she said quietly, "So you read Henderson's telegram. That wasn't very sporting of you, Don. You must have known that if I had wanted you to see it, I'd have shown it to you."

Donald nodded. "But it was something I had to see. After all, June, you ARE Jacob!"

"I'm not. I'm Mrs. Donald Heath."

"It's no good, June," said Donald grimly. "I must have been insane to let you talk me into this."

She went white beneath the words, but Donald pretended not to see or to hear and went doggedly on. "I knew you were as far out of my reach as the stars the first time the paper sent me to interview you."

"My dearest dear," said June, shakily, "I'm no farther away from you than the curve of your arm. I've never been. Oh, Don, dearest, we've been all over this before—again and again."

"It's no use, June. I'll never be anything but a hack newspaper guy. The best I can ever hope for is a hundred a week—and that's not enough to buy you silk stockings."

"Then I'll wear cotton."

"Don't be childish," said Donald savagely. "Be sensible—be reasonable—use your head."

June straightened beneath the sting in his words and her eyes met his steadily, almost coldly. "You're right. I have been childish. I've used my heart instead of my head. I roped you into this marriage. The best I can ever hope for is a hundred a week—and that's not enough to buy you silk stockings."

"Have you known each other such a long time?" Natalie asked politely, not because she was particularly interested, but because Mrs. Edmonds seemed to expect it.

"Practically since childhood—since grammar school days," said Mrs. Edmonds almost eagerly. "We were sweethearts in high school. Of course, Willie is a great deal older than I. He was finishing high school when I started. We were engaged when I was 17, and he went away to West Point."

She was silent for a moment, looking out over the lovely, restless turquoise of the sea that came rolling in on the beach in great white-topped breakers.

Betsy and Natalie waited politely. Natalie lay full-length on a gaily patterned beach mattress, her beautiful legs brown and smooth, the white of her brief linen shorts and sleeveless shirt making her look even more alluring than her formal clothes. Betsy, in a gingham play-suit, her bare feet in silly little wooden-soled clogs, leaned back against a striped canvas beach-rest; her brown legs tucked beneath her. But Mrs. Edmonds, corseted and carefully made up, in a filmy white frock, sat rather erect in a canvas chair.

Well, she couldn't plead any more, couldn't humble herself any further. She had been in the very dust at his feet, and he had said that it wasn't enough. She crept back to the small, gay cottage that had been like a shrine for their love and, like a wounded animal that crawls into its burrow to nurse its pain, she went inside, closing the door against the bright, golden sunshine that seemed a mockery now.

On the beach, behind the friendly shelter of a gaily striped umbrella, Natalie, Mrs. Edmonds and Betsy lay away the rest of the afternoon, talking idly, going over and over the happenings of the night before and the things Hugh Powell had said.

Mrs. Edmonds chuckled suddenly, though there were spots of color high on her cheeks beneath her carefully applied makeup.

"Mr. Powell looked so startled when he discovered that the major and I were honeymooners, too—not just chaperones, or visitors," she drawled. Betsy and Natalie realized that she was leading up to something that she very much wanted to say without being entirely sure how to say it. "I suppose it does seem rather absurd for two people as old as Willie and I to be honeymooning like a couple of youngsters—but Willie and I have waited a long time for a honeymoon."

"Have you known each other such a long time?" Natalie asked politely, not because she was particularly interested, but because Mrs. Edmonds seemed to expect it.

"Practically since childhood—since grammar school days," said Mrs. Edmonds almost eagerly. "We were sweethearts in high school. Of course, Willie is a great deal older than I. He was finishing high school when I started. We were engaged when I was 17, and he went away to West Point."

But Mrs. Edmonds, corseted and carefully made up, in a filmy white frock, sat rather erect in a canvas chair.

"It was at West Point two weeks before graduation that he met Estelle," said Mrs. Edmonds, and something in her tone made Betsy and Natalie exchange swift, significant glances. She was there visiting her brother during commencement week. Willie wanted me to come up, but Father was sick and I couldn't leave him. Father passed away the following week so, in spite of what happened, I have always been glad that I didn't go. Though perhaps if I had, things might have been so different for Willie and me."

Dr. Frank M. Wilson Honored At Dinner by Chest Workers

Campaign Chairman Presented Framed Certificate at Y.M.C.A.

Leaders in the Cumberland Community Chest campaign met last night in the Central Y. M. C. A. at a "Dutch treat" dinner in honor of Dr. Frank M. Wilson, who successfully led the workers through a campaign which reached its goal the first time in several years.

Dr. Wilson was presented with a framed certificate signed by members of the board of directors of the Cumberland Community Chest. Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum, who was leader of the women's division, and Mrs. W. M. Somerville, her assistant, each were presented with tokens for their efforts.

Presentations Made

Presentations were made by Miles G. Thompson, who lead the classified division. Both he and Harold W. Smith, president of the Community Chest, lauded the efforts of all the workers, and praised the leadership.

Dr. Wilson expressed his appreciation for the cooperation of all those who worked on the drive and participated by contributing and encouraging the volunteer solicitors. He mentioned particularly the work of William A. Gunter, chairman of advanced gifts; Miles G. Thompson, chairman of classified; Mrs. Rosenbaum and Mrs. Somerville of the women's division, chairman and members of the publicity committee; the audit bureau, organization committee and office staff. All of these people he said, working together made the drive successful.

Each contributed something in the way of service to the community, and without the help and assistance of every individual, including every worker and contributor, the work would have been poorly done and the campaign another failure.

Wilson Pledges Support

Dr. Wilson pledged his support to the Chest in the future, and offered words of encouragement to

Baltimore Negro
Is Jailed Here
Must Serve 30 Days in Default of Fines on Motor Law Violations

One negro was sentenced to jail in default of fines and another was acquitted yesterday in trial magistrate's court on state motor law charges which grew out of a "joy ride" in an automobile without the owner's consent.

Melvin A. Sheridan, of Baltimore, was committed to the county jail for thirty days when he was unable to pay fines and costs totaling $32.20 on charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and reckless driving.

Blair Johnson, 152 Wineo street, was acquitted of riding in the car when he allegedly knew it was being driven without the owner's permission.

State Trooper Carl G. Storm, who preferred the charges, said he suspected the car was stolen when he saw the negroes riding near Frostburg, Monday night. It developed that Sheridan had been employed to drive the car of Charles Lipsitz, Baltimore salesman, and instead of putting the machine in a garage Monday night he took Johnson for a ride.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew presided at the hearing.

'Picture of the Year'
To Be Selected Monday
At Camera Club Banquet

Plans are nearing completion for the annual banquet of the Cumberland Camera Club, to be held at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club at 7 o'clock Monday night, it was announced last night by Robert O. Slemmer, secretary.

The dinner will be featured by selection of the "picture of the year" from among the top five prints in the club's monthly competitions. Out-of-town camera experts have been invited to act as judges, according to Slemmer.

The prints in competition Monday night will be placed in the club's traveling salon next month and sent out on a year's tour.

Trophies for the three best pictures will be awarded by Harvey's jewelry store, where tickets to the banquet may be obtained.

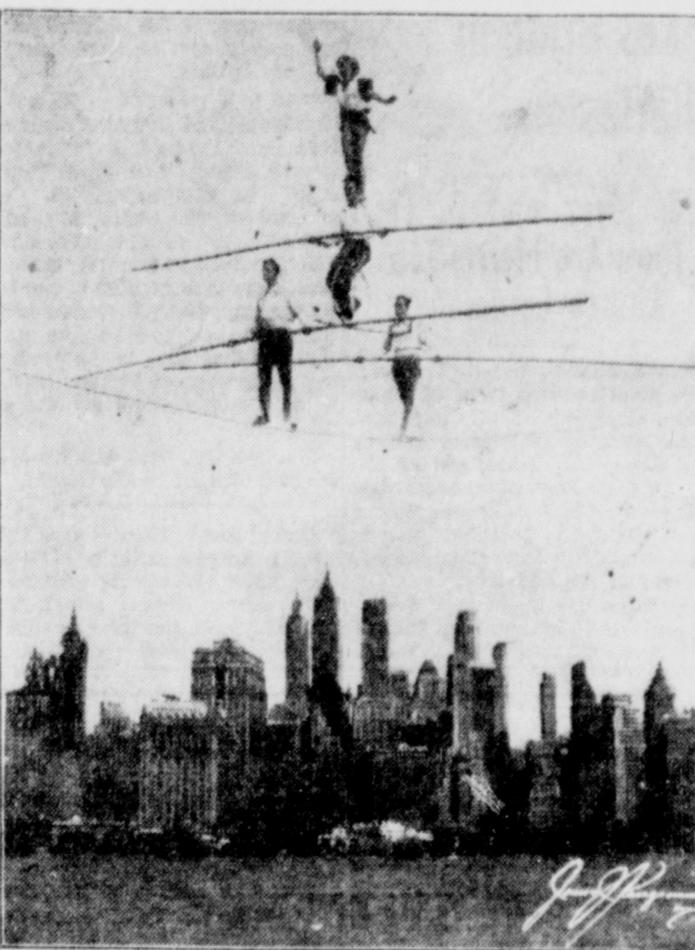

The affair is open to all camera fans, whether members of the club or not, Slemmer said.

They will take a four months course in bench, vise and floor work necessary to a machinist and will receive instructions in the use of power tools and the operation and care of various types of aviation motors.

A Professor of Ancient History Adds a New Page to His Notebook, under the Section Titled Love

By JOSEPH BARTON
Prof. Jasper, who held the chair and Dorothy Kilmer, who just about ancient history at Fairhaven run the social and athletic affairs School, had dropped in to visit with the school. Miss Thompson, the middle-aged teacher, "I can readily understand of girls at the high school that they might be trouble-makers. Miss Thompson went from her severe habits sufficiently to appreciate the ascetic professor's unaccustomed visit.

I would not have troubled you, Miss Thompson, had I not felt that something these youngsters have picked up from the newspapers or the radio programs?"

"I can't determine until I know the facts of the matter. Prof. Jasper, Did they say anything out of the way to you to arouse your suspicions?"

"Well, it isn't anything the young persons said. It is the way they said it—and the way they act. I've read of youths in the less enlightened countries—taking control of their own actions."

"You mean they disobeyed?"

"I'll give you an example. I was disobey you, Prof. Jasper?" Miss reviewing the early councils between Thompson prided herself on her the Greeks and the Phoenicians discipline—and had for 20 years Prof. Jasper knew that. He had been at Fairhaven when she came.

"I'm sure that whatever is happening is no fault of your supervision. Miss Thompson," he suggested mildly. "It seems to me however, that the conduct of certain of my students is becoming, well, highly irregular!"

Miss Thompson said curtly. "I will have a private little talk with the girls involved, and I shall send a list of the boys to the president!" Mr. Jasper raised an ineffectual hand in half protest. "We must not be hasty, Miss Thompson," he defended. "I don't mean to insinuate that there has been anything actually bad going on, if you will excuse the expression. Maybe it's just a reflection of the world's unsettled aspects."

"What happened, please, Mr. Jasper?" Miss Thompson demanded patiently, fixing the professor with a stern look. The dean of women was efficient. She hated to waste words or time in school affairs.

"To begin with, I must remind you that I have in my third-year class in ancient history a motley assortment. Most of the more spirited youngsters at Fairhaven are included."

Today's GARDEN-GRAF

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

LEAF SPOT ON STRAWBERRY PLANTS

Leaf spot, often referred to as "leaf blight," "sun scald" and "scorch," is a common disease of strawberry plants. It rarely attacks new and thrifty plantings but causes a great deal of injury to older or more depleted plantings.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, the purplish or red spots become whitish at the center and drop out. This results in the plant losing its foliage, its vigor and not maturing a crop of berries.

To control leaf spot, spray with a 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture three or four times a year, making at least one application before the blossoms open. Some fruit-growers mow the strawberry vines close to the ground after harvesting the fruit. The foliage is gathered and burned. As the new growth appears it is kept sprayed at ten-day intervals.

At one time pins were so expensive that only the wealthy could afford to purchase them, and their sale was limited to Jan. 1 and 2 of each year. On those days women got their allowance from their husbands to buy pins, hence the name "pin money."

William Henry Jackson, pioneer photographer and painter, often called the first news photographer, observed his ninety-eighth birthday in Washington, D. C., recently.

Movie Stand-ins
Lead a Soft Life

Are Well Paid, but Are Out of Work for Long Periods

HOLLYWOOD, May 6 (P)—Stand-ins for movie stars, once humorously described as "step-ins" by George Arliss, lead a pretty soft life—when they work—but studios figure today that their chances of rising above the ranks is about one in a million.

Their pay averages $16.50 a day, which usually is enough to tide them over between jobs. If they do stunts or dangerous tasks, there always is a bonus.

Those who are good sometimes remain with one actor or actress for years. Others work for first one player and then another.

A few occasionally get bit parts but most of them never pass the point where, to relieve the stars, they just stand or sit before the camera while photographers line up proper lens and lighting effects. They step aside for the first team when the reels begin to turn.

Unlike a popular conception, stand-ins don't necessarily have to closely resemble a star. Sometimes they do, but it's merely coincidence. Usually, however, for judging proper lighting effects, they have similar complexions and stature.

"Slim" Talbot is one of the highest paid. He accompanied Gary Cooper from Montana to Hollywood and has remained with the star ever since. He is lean, lank and slow-moving, like Cooper, but otherwise there is no resemblance.

Sally Sage Long has been Bette Davis's stand-in and they are close personal friends. James Cagney has used "Red" Breen for years, while Jim Fleming has a job whenever Errol Flynn works. Fleming once was Flynn's butler.

Edward G. Robinson says he has a face no stand-in could duplicate but Dick La Marr comes close.

The world is full of willing people—some willing to work. The others willing to let them.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

GOOD RUBBER BRIDGE
MAKING YOUR contract and forgetting about extra tricks is supposed by most players to constitute good rubber bridge. That is good enough if there would be any risk entailed in going after the extras which could be avoided by being more conservative. But if the extra tricks are right there to be made without any risk to the contract, the fine player will strive for them. In the long run, those extra points can mean the difference between being ahead or behind if you are competing generally with players who otherwise are fairly evenly matched.

my, led a club to the A and East returned his spade 3 to the A. Another club was led, West winning and returning his heart 10 to the A. The club 5 was then ruffed in dummy, and the declarer took the rest of the tricks.

South could just as well have had two extra tricks, by setting up diamonds through ruffing. He could have won the opener with the heart K, and down the diamond A and ruffed a diamond with the spade 5. The spade 2 to the J could be followed by a second diamond ruff. The spade 6 to the 10 could have brought a third ruff. The last trump could have been dropped then and the heart 9 led to the K. Two set-up diamonds then would have furnished two club discards, limiting the total loss to one trick instead of two.

Corner Drugstore, in Large Sense Of Word, Disappearing Institution

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
Within the past few years our literature has begun to notice the figures in American life who have been so familiar as hardly to attract the attention of the literary world. There was Dr. Hertzler's Horse and Buggy Doctor, followed by Country Editor, Country Person, Hoss Doctor, and now we have Robert B. Nixon, Jr.'s account of his father, called Corner Druggist (Prentice-Hall, Inc., publishers, New York, 1941).

The corner drug store still exists and I suppose there must be some good reason why corners are selected, although I am not so sure I understand it, but the corner druggist in the old sense of the word is largely disappearing. He was the neighborhood druggist, just as the doctor was the neighborhood doctor and the minister was the neighborhood minister. His position, as Mr. Nixon says, was at once the most obscure and the most important in his community. He performed the greatest service for the lowest pay.

Apprentice at Seventeen

The corner druggist here described began his apprenticeship when he was 17 years old. He lived over the drug store. He was available day and night. He did a good deal of medical practice in the way of prescribing for common ailments. So far as I can see, he did it pretty well. He took care of a great many illnesses at a cost which the patient could afford to pay and filled a place in the practice of medicine which I am not sure was supplied by the regular medical profession.

The Public Relations Counsel of the various druggists associations tell me that this practice is dying out but I am not so sure but what it is a good practice. Your baker now sells you vitamins, why shouldn't your druggist sell you simple herbs?

CHRYSLER CORPORATION'S NO. 1 CAR

drugstore was an institution unique in American life.

Neighborhood Accommodation
The corner drugstore was an accommodation center much like the modern filling station. People come there to use the telephones or the rest rooms, to get free maps and free information, and occasionally to buy. So it was with the drugstore. Father said that loafers bought cigars in other places and came there to smoke them; that they bought drugs somewhere else and came there to be entertained. People dropped in for the weather report, to look at the thermometer, to buy two-cent stamps, to have specks taken out of their eyes . . .

Father, like most old-time pharmacists, cursed the people who came to talk instead of to buy, but he would have been lost without the gossip and bustle around him. Because he was on duty eighteen hours a day, he had no opportunity for Scotland both eat oatmeal" and some Scotchman in his audience sneered. "The men and horses in any other social life. The familiar story was of the pharmacist and his friend . . . who were playing checkers . . . The latter whispered, "Doc, a customer just came into the store!"

"Yes, I know. Keep still. Maybe he feels out of sorts, headache, etc., and the liver usually has nothing to do with the condition."

The average neighborhood druggist has a hard time keeping his head above water, or staying a few steps ahead of the sheriff . . .

"Suppose a druggist fills six prescriptions a day at sixty or even seventy-five cents. Let us say it is all profit. That makes $3.60 or $4.50. Let us say his average daily business is thirty dollars. That is a very fair average. His profits cannot possibly be over one-third of his gross receipts. That gives him ten dollars. He must pay store rent, light, heat, and a relief clerk, and usually he has a boy to help him."

Questions and Answers

S. D. — "Is oatmeal, eaten every morning, harmful for a bad liver, and what would you advise for a bad liver?"

Answer — Oatmeal is not harmful for anything, but is a highly nutritious and well-balanced article of diet. Doctor Johnson once sneered. "The men and horses in any other social life. The familiar story was of the pharmacist and his friend . . . who were playing checkers . . . The latter whispered, "Doc, a customer just came into the store!"

Acquiring Herman Bolsters Dodger Pennant Chances

Cubs Send Second Baseman to Brooklyn for Gilbert and $50,000

BY JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, May 6 (AP)—Larry MacPhail, who has spent something like three-quarters of a million dollars for players in four years, lured Second Baseman Bill Herman away from the Chicago Cubs today in a deal he hoped would stop the last leak in the Brooklyn Dodgers' pennant plans.

Piece by piece, with indefatigable optimism, MacPhail has rebuilt the Dodgers from stem to stern since he took charge of the club in 1938. His "all-out" raid on the cash drawer in the last eleven months has amounted to approximately $343,000, figuring the cash in this maneuver at $25,000.

Today's deal brought the Dodgers Herman in exchange for a good young outfielder, Charley Gilbert, and $50,000. Then in a separate transaction with Brooklyn's Montreal farm, the Cub bought Infelder Johnny Hudson for $25,000.

Tamulis Reclaimed

It was a year ago next month the fabulous MacPhail obtained Outfielder Joe Medwick and Pitcher Curt Davis from the St. Louis Cardinals for $135,000 in cash and players.

Buying a pennant wasn't that easy, but the red-head is a dynamo that never runs down and since then he has poured out money in an unceasing stream.

He turned over $100,000 and players to the Phillies for Pitcher Kirby Higbe. One of the cargo in that transaction, Lefty Vito Tamulis, was reclaimed today in exchange for Southpaw Lee Grissom.

Another $50,000 and players were sent to the St. Louis Cardinals for Catcher Mickey Owen. Second Baseman Alex Kampouris was bought from Newark, a Yankee farm, for $15,000. Relief Pitcher Mac Brown was purchased from Pittsburgh for $20,000.

Infield Weakest Link

Through all of these deals MacPhail acknowledged the Dodgers had a weakness in their infield. His first year here he spent $50,000 for First Baseman Dolph Camilli and last season he spent $75,000 for Rookie Pee-wee Reese, a shortstop. Third Baseman Harry Lavagetto was a holdover from the previous administration.

The Cubs are rebuilding and Herman, at least, didn't figure in their plans. He was easily the best second baseman in the league last year, but he will be 32 years old in July. Furthermore he has batted only .194 this spring even though he hit more than .300 in seven of his ten years with the Cubs.

Whether he will make Brooklyn a pennant winner remains to be seen, but if he doesn't MacPhail probably will keep on buying players until the Dodgers do.

Women of Many Lands Protest War Shambles

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A recent dispatch from Vichy reads:

"In an effort to halt France's rapidly falling birth rate, the Pétain government has drafted a law making it impossible for any husband or wife to obtain a divorce until after three years of marriage."

A previous law provides that a divorce court judge may compel a couple to "think things over" for twenty days. The new law will empower judges to increase this reconciliation period to two years. French divorcees have recently been running about twenty thousand a year.

With the exception of Germany, the birth rate has been falling alarmingly, all over the world.

especially among people regarded as the best timber for citizenship, whose offspring would actually improve the race. A recent Gallup survey shows that over sixty per cent of American families are either childless or have only one or two children.

Still Convincing

It begins to look as if thinking women were considering seriously the Lysistrata remedy for controlling wars. If you remember that amazing Greek play, you will realize that the arguments are as convincing today as when that classic comedy was written, about 2,500 years ago.

Lysistrata, who seems to have been a forerunner of the modern woman, persuaded women not to have children, to be slaughtered in wars. The writer of the play, Aristophanes, as you will recall saluted this tragic subject, with a diabolical wit and humor.

Today, as in ancient Greece, there is a feeling among women the world over that their sons are worthy to be blown to bits, drowned or shot, that some

Big Progress Achieved

Since the last World war, a quarter of a century ago, women have made more progress, and made themselves more felt in world affairs than in a comparative number of centuries.

Again we quote Miss Paul:

"Woman's instinct is constructive. It is her instinct to build and create, not to tear down. She wants to help to build up the world, equally. This latest world crisis came about without the intervention of women. There must never be another Versailles Treaty."

Stocks Take Cue from Commodities And Step into Best Rally of Year

Rails, Oils and Specialties
Forefront; Sales Total
907,940 Shares

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, May 6 (AP)—The stock market today took its cue from soaring commodities and stepped into one of the broadest and fastest rallies of the year.

Rails, oils, steels and specialties were in the forefront, many at new 1941-tops with gains of one to more than two points. Leaders were under the pest in some instances at the close but many emerged around the peaks of the day.

The list tilted forward from the start as the idea began to grow that selling pessimism had been overcome notwithstanding bad war news, tax fears and labor worries. Hopeful business inspiration included mounting retail spending, predictions freight loadings soon would touch the largest weekly totals since 1939 and indications steel mill operations would push up briskly in the near future.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was up 6 of a point at forty, duplicating a recovery of April 3. Transfers of 907,940 shares compared with 415,130 yesterday and were the second highest for 1941 to date.

Wheat opened strong when word was passed that the Senate would consider the eighty-five per cent bill providing crop loans at eighty-five per cent of parity pulled all grain values higher today with wheat and soybeans shattering previous high marks of the year.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was up 6 of a point at forty, duplicating a recovery of April 3. Transfers of 907,940 shares compared with 415,130 yesterday and were the second highest for 1941 to date.

Savage arms got into new high ground with an advance of 1% on announcement stockholders would be asked to vote on a 4-for-1 split-up. General Motors was up a point in the wake of the 1% dividend declared after Monday's close.

Chrysler tacked on 1% and the board later voted a dividend of $1.50 a share. The same amount was paid in March and $1.25 in June a year ago.

Among stocks in the "new high" category were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Standard Oil of California, Indiana and New Jersey, Phillips Petroleum, Ohio Oil, Pure Oil, Socony-Vacuum, Skelly Oil, Panhandle Producing and Preferred of Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate.

North American was an exception, slipping to a new year's low. Other utilities did little or nothing.

Upward spinners in the Curb were Humble Oil, Gulf Oil, Aluminum of America, Jones and Laughlin and American Cyanamid. "B" Volume here was around 129,000 shares versus 66,500 yesterday.

NEW YORK, May 6 (AP)—The stock market today took its cue from soaring commodities and stepped into one of the broadest and fastest rallies of the year.

Rails, oils, steels and specialties were in the forefront, many at new 1941-tops with gains of one to more than two points. Leaders were under the pest in some instances at the close but many emerged around the peaks of the day.

The list tilted forward from the start as the idea began to grow that selling pessimism had been overcome notwithstanding bad war news, tax fears and labor worries.

Hopeful business inspiration included mounting retail spending, predictions freight loadings soon would touch the largest weekly totals since 1939 and indications steel mill operations would push up briskly in the near future.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was up 6 of a point at forty, duplicating a recovery of April 3. Transfers of 907,940 shares compared with 415,130 yesterday and were the second highest for 1941 to date.

Wheat opened strong when word was passed that the Senate would consider the eighty-five per cent bill providing crop loans at eighty-five per cent of parity pulled all grain values higher today with wheat and soybeans shattering previous high marks of the year.

The Associated Press average of sixty stocks was up 6 of a point at forty, duplicating a recovery of April 3. Transfers of 907,940 shares compared with 415,130 yesterday and were the second highest for 1941 to date.

Savage arms got into new high ground with an advance of 1% on announcement stockholders would be asked to vote on a 4-for-1 split-up. General Motors was up a point in the wake of the 1% dividend declared after Monday's close.

Chrysler tacked on 1% and the board later voted a dividend of $1.50 a share. The same amount was paid in March and $1.25 in June a year ago.

Among stocks in the "new high" category were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Standard Oil of California, Indiana and New Jersey, Phillips Petroleum, Ohio Oil, Pure Oil, Socony-Vacuum, Skelly Oil, Panhandle Producing and Preferred of Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate.

North American was an exception, slipping to a new year's low. Other utilities did little or nothing.

Upward spinners in the Curb were Humble Oil, Gulf Oil, Aluminum of America, Jones and Laughlin and American Cyanamid. "B" Volume here was around 129,000 shares versus 66,500 yesterday.

Judy Canova Rings Movie Bell Again

Judy Canova, star of "Scatterbrain," rang the bell again with her latest musical comedy, "Sis Hopkins," which begins today at the Maryland theater.

An even finer cast than characterizes most top-flight musicals is the just boast of "Sis Hopkins." The dead-pan comic of Charles Butterworth is seen as Uncle Horace, Sis Hopkins' hen-pecked uncle. Bob Crosby, bandleader, and brother to Bing Crosby, portrays Jeff Harnsworth. Charming Susan Hayward handles the role of Carol, Sis Hopkins' debutante cousin, with real finesse. Jerry Colonna brings down the house with his inimitable portrayal of a goofy professor.

In the film Sis is seen as coming from her farm home to live with Uncle Horace and his family. Her sincerity and friendliness and lack of sophistication cause her to win the heart of Jeff Harnsworth, sweetheart of Sis' cousin, Carol. Carol retires by having Sis enroll in the local college in the hope that she will make an utter fool of herself. However, Sis takes the campus by storm and is chosen for a role in the college play for which Carol has set her cap. Carol's attempts to get Sis in with the authorities and Sis' frantic effort to have herself bring the film to a fast and hilarious climax.

Marlene Dietrich, the star of Universal's adventurous comedy romance, "The Flame of New Orleans," starting Saturday at the Liberty.

Railroad Bonds Strong

NEW YORK, May 6 (AP)—Railroad bonds found the lights green all along the line in today's market and moved swiftly on the highest prices of the year on average.

The turnover mounted to $14,900,000 par value, the best since April 3, when the carriers likewise established the former 1941 peak and trading swelled to $19,531,400. The volume yesterday was $9,079,100.

Expanding freight and passenger traffic with prospects of better income and improved credit with which to buy equipment to handle the still larger volume expected to develop from the national defense program stimulated bullish enthusiasm for the rails, brokers said. Final prices were at about the day's best and whatever profit taking appeared in the wake of the week-long rise was easily absorbed.

United States governments recorded narrow changes on both the stock exchange and over the counter although the undertow on both markets was steady.

At least that's the opinion of director Frank Capra, whose current film "Meet John Doe," star Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck is now at the Strand.

Pantomime always plays an important part in Capra productions. Remember the two daffy old sisters in the courtroom scene of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town"? With virtually no lines to speak, they almost stole the picture.

In "Meet John Doe" Capra introduces another wacky character who has no lines at all—he is probably one of the standouts of the picture. It's the sign painter, played by Gary Owen, who goes through a long sequence with nary a line to speak. But under Capra's guidance, his pantomime speaks louder—and funnier—than words.

Capra began his career as a gag man for Mack Sennett, long before the movies began to talk back. He learned them to think in terms of pantomime. Later he became director to Harry Langdon, then considered one of the screen's greatest pantomime artists.

THERE'S a rule for your guidance you may not find in the copybooks—but that doesn't subtract one whit from its truth.

Because when you buy a new car this spring you want one that will see you through many a summer.

So while you're trading it's good sense to trade up—to something solidly good through and through.

Trade up, for instance, to the FIREBALL power of Buick's more efficient valve-in-head straight-eight.

Trade up to the thrift of Compound
Carburetion—exclusively Buick's, and as much as 10% to 15% more economical of gasoline than last year.

Trade up to a splendidorous big Body by Fisher—to Buick's all-coil springing that is forever cushiony yet forever free from service attention—to stout, ride-steadying torque-tube drive with nothing about it to go wrong.

Buick's bodies are roomier, its frames huskier—its steering gears go three to four times as long without adjustment and its main bearings have half-again the service life in them.

Things like that really count these days
—yet they're yours in a Buick for a trifle more at most than you'd spend in any event.

Go call on your
Buick dealer now!

Music Machine Licenses Must Be Bought Now

Despite the fact that a measure reducing the state license fee on "juke boxes" from $15.00 to $10.50 is awaiting the signature of Governor O'Conor, the fee must be paid now at the old rate if the machines are to continue to be operated. It was announced yesterday in the office of Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

Court attaches said they had been notified by the state inspector that the measure, if it is signed, will not take effect until June 1. Since the old licenses expired April 30, the new ones must be bought now at a cost of 15.50 unless operators of the music machines wish to forego their operation until June 1.

The new rate, if it becomes law, will apply only to licenses purchased after June 1, it was emphasized. It is illegal to operate the music boxes without a license.

Circuit Court

found guilty by the court and ordered to post a $300 bond to assure payment of $4 weekly to his wife and child. The juvenile court had sentenced him to a year in the House of Correction, suspended on certain conditions. Another non-support charge against him was dismissed by the state's attorney, Ryan, was his attorney.

After the case of Jasper Kimball, charged with stealing $15 worth of lumber from Albert D. Kohn, had gone to trial, a plea of not guilty was confessed by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris. Represented by Ryan, Kimball had been convicted by Magistrate Owen L. Porter and ordered to pay the costs and $5 to Kohn.

Assault Charge Dismissed

Dismissed by the state was a charge against Warren Hice of assaulting Mrs. M. E. Daniels. Hice, represented by William L. Wilson Jr., attorney, had been fined $40 by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew.

Judgment was affirmed when Kathleen Turner dismissed her appeal from her conviction by Magistrate Perdew of assaulting Ethel Crowe January 16. Magistrate Perdew had sentenced the defendant, represented by Ryan, to thirty days in jail but had suspended the sentence.

Conviction of Estel Steinbaugh on a drunken driving charge in February by Magistrate Perdew was affirmed when he failed to appear for trial.

$100 Fine Suspended

Guilty plea to two charges of drunken driving and two charges of reckless driving were entered by Glenn F. Nelson, represented by Ryan.

Records showed that Nelson was fined $125 on drunken and reckless driving charges by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. February 28. In these cases, Judge Huster suspended the $100 fine on the drunken driving count on condition the defendant pay the costs and refrain from drinking and reduced the $25 reckless driving fine to $5.

Nelson was again brought before Magistrate Bruce March 24 on the same charges, with a $100 fine levied for drunken driving and a $5 fine imposed for reckless driving. In these cases, Judge Huster ordered the $100 fine to stand and suspended the $5 fine on the same condition as the previous drunken driving case.

Alcohi Mirror Wins University of Baltimore Journalism Contest

The second annual high school journalism contest sponsored by the University of Baltimore's department of journalism was won by the Alcohi Mirror, Allegany high school's entry.

The publication was considered best in its class of the competing student papers. A certificate was presented to The Tattler, Chey Chase high school, Bethesda, Md., runner-up to the local high school newspaper.

The Spotlight, of Bruce high school, Westernport, was adjudged best in Class 2 and was presented a trophy. The Orange and Black, of Central high school, Lonaconia, was runner-up to the Bruce paper.

In Class 3 with 400 or less students enrolled, The Torch, of LaSalle, high won first prize. St. Michael's high school publication, The Parrot, finished second to LaSalle.

Working under the supervision of Charles P. Voltz, director of the contest, Louis Azrael and Alexander Gifford, both of the university's journalism faculty, the winners were picked by student judges.

Frazier was committed to the county jail in default of bond.

Illness Is Fatal To Local Woman

McKeldin

I'd use the fish I had left over from the last time."

Particularly pointed in these days when small European countries are being swallowed up by the dictators, was the anecdote about the snake which guined down a whole rabbit which distended the reptile's body and then seeing another rabbit through a small hole in the fence, he struck quickly and swallowed it.

The snake was then caught in the hole with its body swollen by a rabbit in the back and another in the front. That typifies the greed and selfishness of many men in the world today, McKeldin declared.

Man should know himself and not despair, for if any human being has the grit, spirit, and gumption to fight on he is saved, McKeldin said. He gave examples of many famed writers, doctors, and scientists who were afflicted with disease, blindness and hunger, who had that spark which enabled them to reach the pinnacle of success.

We All Have a Spark

We all have in us that bit of spark with which heredity, environment or wealth have nothing to do. It is our hearts and souls which we derive from God in whose image we are made, McKeldin said.

Man must possess egoism which does not mean he should be an egotist, he should be humble but not humiliated, and he should have self-control, McKeldin declared. This spirit is what America needs today if it is to survive the crisis now facing the world, he added.

"Why fear?" McKeldin asked. "Have that spirit which Rupert Brooke epitomized just before the battle of Gallipoli when he said: 'God help raised that He has matched us with this hour.'

District Governor Speaks

George M. Young, vice president of the club was toastmaster for the banquet and he introduced Charles L. George, club president, briefly reviewed the organization's career during the past two years.

Harry J. Schwartz, district governor of Maryland Exchange clubs, brought a message of welcome from the national headquarters and praised the local group for its service to the community.

A floor show by pupils of the Mary Catherine Steckman dance studios entertained the club the dance for which Jimmy Andrews orchestra played.

Sacrifices

no holding back of any member of the team."

Reports Encouraging

Referring to "encouraging reports submitted, the speaker said that "in spite of early confusion, we have made a good start on our rearmament program."

The talks made by General Marshall and Admiral Stark gave those present "a feeling of confidence," Price continued, pointing out that the army now numbers a million and a quarter men "of the finest type," with a high morale, and that the personnel of the navy is "superior to that of any in the world."

The responsibility of keeping that essential morale high, he added, "rests with those of us who live in Cumberland and all the other towns and cities which make up this great country."

"Unless these boys of ours feel that we are supporting and encouraging them by our efforts to produce, our willingness to make some sacrifice ourselves, they are going to feel that their efforts are in vain . . ."

"We have embarked in a great movement to save a way of life which has given us more than any other people have enjoyed. Our democratic form of government is by its nature wasteful. It is a luxury. Are we willing to pay what it costs to preserve it?

"The next few months will provide the answer."

Another 'Benefit Performance'

Commissioner James Holmes criticized members of the legislature for introducing the bill without consulting the board.

In the course of the discussion and apparently unnoticed by the delegation, Commissioner Patrick J. Stakem, only Democratic member of the board, commented that he had reason to believe the governor is going to sign the bond issue measure. He did not amplify this statement.

"He is now in the grip of forces beyond his control, and if this world performance is to end in success, rather than tragedy, it behoves all of us rapidly to prepare and firmlly hold the safety net of national defense."

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States pledged itself to support the defense program in every way, Price said, adding that the Cumberland chamber "heartily endorses" the position of the national body.

"We now urge every citizen of Cumberland," he concluded, "to face the facts, dig his heels in, grab the net, grit his teeth and do his part to save a way of life that has been so kind to us, even though many sacrifices may be necessary to assure success."

Hitlerism

defeatism and hopelessness, there is really no cause for discouragement, but sound reason for optimism, the speaker declared. Hitler's amazing career is not unique, he pointed out, as history shows other conquerors have come upon the world scene only to have their empires crumble away because they were not built upon a spirit that endures. Napoleon had an empire greater than Hitler's today, yet it has passed into oblivion.

Schools Are Important

Our first line of defense is in our schools, Rowand said, as our problem is one of ideas rather than guns, tanks and ships, and if we can keep clear in our minds and in the minds of our youth the true worth of democratic principles, we are safe.

This remark was prompted by the introduction to the club members of Walter Kennedy, outstanding LaSalle high school senior, who was the third student to be a guest of the club in program of introducing the three outstanding students of each of the local high schools.

Francis Shaffer, of the same school, was the one introduced last week.

The moon goes around the earth approximately 13 times a year, making one revolution in 27 days and 8 hours.

America May

truck highway projects to be undertaken would be a road running north to south along the whole length of the Atlantic coast.

Appropriations for the new public works program would not be sought until a definite slackening in defense employment had been noted. All Congress would be to do in this time would be to provide the necessary authority so as to permit plans to be prepared.

In conclusion, he forcibly put across that "this is the only nation on the face of the earth, with few exceptions, where men can congregate, discuss matters freely and do as they wish."

America May Enter War, Petrott Tells K. of C. Audience

If Attacked U. S. Will Give Hitler Plenty of Trouble, He Says

"If attacked or invaded, the United States will give Mr. Hitler plenty of trouble," Maryland's Adjutant General Francis A. Petrott of Baltimore, told a large gathering last night at the K. of C. home North Mechanic street.

Occasion for Adjutant General Petrott's stirring address on "National Defense" was a patriotic program held by Cumberland Council No. 586, Knights of Columbus, in honor of the 139 members of the council who are registered under the Selective Service Act.

Despite some arduous moments and glaring mistakes, he said, "America has come through another year." However, he added, "with events throughout the world as they are today, possibilities of the United States entering the war are highly possible."

Declaring that "we have profited by mistakes made in the last war," Adjutant General Petrott pointed out that "we are not being dragged into the war other than to protect our American Democracy."

Americans Will Fight

Referring to Hitler's recent Reichstag speech, he said Mr. Hitler forgot one thing—the spirit that has protected American liberty and Democracy. "Americans have always fought for ideals of liberty," he added.

Adjutant General Petrott, who fought in the air corps during the World war, emphasized that the boys who are now in uniforms and those who have not the patriotism they should, will sooner or later be endowed with the heritage of American democracy. He added "before this thing is over many men will don uniform, and see some kind of service."

"Our cause is militantly of Christian faith and true Christian brotherhood," he said. "It is not too much to say that it is the militancy of the Lord Himself."

Then he outlined a part of our present defensive and armament program.

In addition to the many problems this nation solved while participating in the last World war, said war also taught us to make preparations for what may be expected after hostilities have ceased. As part of our present defensive and armament program, an effort is being made to avoid at this time some of the personal difficulties which faced men inducted into military service during the last World war. Non-profit organizations known as Soldiers and Sailors Service Council are being organized. Its principal function will be the routing of requests for assistance by draftees or their families to the persons or agencies qualified to give such aid.

As to the future of post-war planning, arrangements are being made to promote the adjustment process back to more normal condition after the defense program has been completed. The president has already announced that he will suggest the enactment of broad enabling legislation laying the ground work for a large post-defense public works program.

Plan Post-War Program

"As examples of the type of work he believes should be undertaken, he has mentioned a national system of express highways, public housing, and hospital construction. While the essential purpose would be to take up the slack in employment as the defense program tapers off, emphasis would be placed on the type of project that would bring some return to the government."

In this connection, the president intends to ask that serious consideration be given to the so-called excess condemnation principle of requiring land for highway construction. He has called attention to the fact that several state governments have been successful in employing this procedure for participating in the increased land values that follow highway construction. While only tentative plans have been worked out so far, it is believed that one of the first new

Mrs. Byron Favors "All-Out-Aid" to Great Britain

Pledges Support of Defense Program at Westport Rally

WESTERNPORT, May 6—Carrying her campaign for election to the House of Representatives into Allegany county, Mrs. Katherine Byron of Williamsport, Democratic nominee in the Sixth Congressional district, addressed a large crowd of voters at a rally here tonight after spending most of the day at Lake where she inspected the paper mills and greeted many of the employees personally. She was given an enthusiastic reception.

In her talk tonight Mrs. Byron pledged to support the administration's national defense program and said she favors "all-out-aid" to Britain.

Mrs. Byron told her audience that she considers the Savage river dam the most important project the federal government has started in Maryland and that after her election she will continue the efforts of her late husband to see that the dam is brought to a successful completion.

Meeting Largely Attended

A large crowd attended the meeting which was called to order by Miss Anna LeNan, president of the Westport and Luke Democratic Women's Club. She introduced Mrs. E. O. Edmundson, of Cumberland, president of the United Maryland Branch of the United Democratic Women's Clubs, who spoke in behalf of Mrs. Byron's election.

J. Estel Kenny, president of the Board of Election Supervisors of Allegany County was then introduced and presided over the rest of the program.

Plans Post-War Program

"As examples of the type of work he believes should be undertaken, he has mentioned a national system of express highways, public housing, and hospital construction. While the essential purpose would be to take up the slack in employment as the defense program tapers off, emphasis would be placed on the type of project that would bring some return to the government."

Sacrifices Required If Democracy Is To Be Saved, Henry Price Says

American Form of Government Is 'Luxury,' Speaker States

An appeal to every citizen of Cumberland to make the sacrifices which are going to be necessary to preserve the "luxury" of democracy was sounded last night in the weekly broadcast of the chamber of commerce over Station WTBO.

The speaker was Harry W. Price, who was a member of the delegation from the Cumberland chamber to the twenty-ninth annual session of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Washington last week.

The chief topic of discussion at the meeting was "What's Ahead for America?" Price reported out that "even while the subject was being discussed, the defeat of the Greeks and the rapidly changing position of the British made the question less easy to answer."

Co-operation Needed

But out of all the meetings and the talks, certain facts became ap-

McKeldin Thrills Exchange Club With Stories

Baltimorean Ranges from Humorous to Sublime in Anecdotes

Theodore R. McKeldin, prominent Baltimore attorney, held his audience spell-bound last night at the second anniversary banquet of the Cumberland Exchange Club at the All Ghail Shrine Country Club.

Using many anecdotes, McKeldin illustrated various points of man's potential greatness with such vividness and humor, that after forty-five minutes of such stories he was given an ovation.

Among his stories was one about the old shoemaker who was about to die and who had talked with God. God promised to visit him the next day. The old man shined up a pair of his best shoes, laid out a meal of milk and honey and prepared for the Lord's visit next day.

Early that morning he heard a knock at his door. Rushing to the partial he found it was only an old beggar. Although downcast, the shoemaker gave the beggar the new pair of shoes. The next knock was by an old woman carrying a bundle of faggots. The cobbler gave her some food.

Finally, late that day, a timid knock was heard by the old man. This time a little girl appeared on the threshold, lost and crying. Feeding her some milk and taking her home, the old man trudged back to his home and wearily went to bed thinking he had been forgotten by God.

At midnight a soft voice came to him and said: "Do not despair of me. I am visiting you, for I have been here three times today. The old cobbler passed away happy at last."

Talks were also made by Mrs. Nora Fleming of Cumberland, president of the county branch; Dr. J. C. Danks, of Westport and John J. McMullen of Cumberland, all who urged the election of Mrs. Byron at the special election May 27.

Mrs. Paul Wolfkill, of Piedmont, sang several vocal selections.

Route of Parade Changed for B.&O. Day Here May 28

Procession To March over Thomas Street Instead of Maryland Avenue

Changing of the route of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Employees' Cumberland day parade Wednesday, May 28, from Maryland avenue to Thomas street via Second street, so as to avoid any possible delay at the Baltimore street rail crossing, was announced yesterday by Thomas P. Conlon, parade marshal.

The parade, scheduled to start from the Baltimore and Ohio Y.M.C.A. at 4 p.m., will march up Virginia avenue to Second street, to Thomas to Winecoff to Williams to Centre to Smith to Mechanic to Baltimore to George and thence to the state armory where the various units will disband.

Conlon said that the reviewing stand will be located in front of Bopp's Flower Shop, Baltimore street, and admission to the stand will be by card only.

Fifth — That there will not be enough man hours available without taking some of them away from many items of production that we now look upon as necessities.

Second — That this program must be carried out with great rapidity.

Third — That every unit of man hours of every employable person will be necessary to carry on this program.

Fourth — That there will be no difficulty about paying the taxes for the succeeding years.

Fifth — That the financing of this program, even though two thirds of the cost be deferred to later generations, will seriously interfere with our present standard of living.

Sixth — That the job can be done if all instruments of production, labor, capital and government pull together with

Wage-Hour Law Described At Conference Table Here

McCormick and Needle Speak on Day and Night Programs

High-lighting a rapidly moving series of events in Cumberland that started with meetings in the council chamber of the city hall yesterday morning and concluded with a public information session in Textile hall last evening, the "Wage-Hour Conference Table" program brought together representative leaders of both sections of organized labor and employers here for the first time.

Cumberland labor, business and industrial leaders met with Leo H. McCormick, director of the Maryland office of the Wage and Hour division, United States Department of Labor, and Bernard S. Needle, attorney for the Maryland office of the Wage and Hour division at 6:45 p.m., to participate in an information program, broadcast over station WTBO.

The only jury trial was that of Ralph L. Wharton, accused of killing a deer out of season. The jury acquitted him of the charge, which was placed against him February 13 by Game Warden Battle Mixon, Wharton, represented by Edward J. Ryan, attorney, had asked a jury trial when arraigned in trial magistrate's court.

Associate Judge William A. Hustler acquitted Ralph C. O'Hara of a drunken driving charge brought by State Trooper William E. Hopkins, who arrested him March 10 on Oldtown road. Convicted by Magistrate Frank A. Perdue, he had been fined $100 and costs. He was represented by Ryan.

Decision Reserved

Another drunken driving case heard by the court was that of Harold S. Hughes, who had been convicted by Magistrate Perdue in February. Decision was reserved by Judge Hustler. The defendant was represented by William H. Geppert, attorney.

Clarence R. Sween, fined $10 by Magistrate Owen L. Porter for passing on a curve, was found not guilty by Judge Hustler. Charles G. Watson was his attorney.

William Kalmeyer, represented by Ryan, was ordered to post bond of $500, to insure payment of $650 weekly for the support of his wife after being found guilty by the platters of non-support. Workmen Start Excavating for $12,000 Church

Will Replace Bethany U. B. Building Torn Down after Fire

Workmen will start excavating today for the foundation and basement of the new $12,000 auditorium and sanctuary of the Bethany United Brethren church at Race and Fourth streets, according to the Rev. Charles K. Welch, pastor.

The new building will replace the old concrete block structure which has been used as a sanctuary since 1908, and was recently torn down after a fire had destroyed the roof of the building.

According to building plans, approved by the city engineer, the new structure will be sixty-five feet long, forty feet wide and forty feet high and will be of brick and steel construction with a fourteen inch concrete foundation and asbestos shingle roof. The building contractor is Caleb White and plans were provided by the Taylor Lumber Company.

The basement will be used for a "Wage-Hour Conference Table" program.

Because it was church property, involved, the commissioners unanimously voted to allow an insolvency suit against it. Consequently the suit against it was invalid.

Somehow the case continued to drag until today, when Fout obtained letters of administration from the orphans court.

The tellers of the tale were County Tax Collector Alvan C. Thompson and Floyd Hout, newly-appointed administrator of the estate of Edward B. Spicer.

According to Thompson and Hout, Spicer who lived on the Valley road just across the Pennsylvania line will be to St. Mary's church, of which he was a member, a farm property in Pennsylvania and a house and lot on Grand avenue here, naming a Cumberland bank as executor.

Because the will did not specify that the church was the one located on Oldtown road in Cumberland, the attorney for the bank filed an equity suit in circuit court asking instructions on how to interpret the will. This case dragged on until another lawyer entered the picture on behalf of the church. He filed another suit against the bank as administrator in an effort to have the matter settled, but died before any action was taken.
